Table of contents

Phonological acquisition

Phonotactics and alternations: Testing the connection with artificial language learning
Joe Pater and Anne-Michelle Tessier.................................................................1

Sonority, syllable weight, and contextual asymmetries in cluster production and reduction
Della Chambless.................................................................17

Phonetics-phonology interface

Lateral acoustics and phonotactics in Australian languages
Kathryn Flack.................................................................37

The French stratum of English
Ben Gelbart.................................................................59

Voicing and geminacy in Japanese: An acoustic and perceptual study
Shigeto Kawahara.................................................................87

The perception of epenthetic stops in English: The effects of cluster type and silent interval duration
Takahito Shinya.................................................................121

Segmental influences on F0: Automatic or controlled?
John Kingston.................................................................151